Why I Love Python

It's not like I've tried most programming languages, but I like Python the most from the ones I've tried. Of course, the reason is that I can do almost everything I need with Python. I usually write scripts for tasks that are bothersome, and so far, I've been able to accomplish nearly everything I've thought of with Python. All I need is some Googling and help from ChatGPT to fix a few parts.

Don't Stress

I don't understand why some people overstress. Look back at the things that used to feel so intense, and now they're just memories. Think about this: the things that make you stressed right now will also pass, just like the ones that came before. Focus on the present, and don't let temporary challenges overwhelm you.

Rant #1

Sometimes I really think we're not using all the tools we have available. Come on, let's be real—anyone can go online and learn most skills, then make a living. Yet we still insist on sticking to the default path of going to schools. Don't get me wrong, I think schools are very useful too, but we're not making full use of the resources at hand.
